LightHouse Beach, California

It is a blue-gray house on a hill... downwards is the Pacific. Strong, violent, cold, but of extraordinary beauty. The waves that form there are a source of inspiration, of suffering sometimes, often of great sensations. They break onto a beach of light sand.

It is a few miles south of San Francisco, a few hundred miles north of Los Angeles, just to the west of the famous Silicon Valley, and a stone's throw from the San Andreas fault which one day might make the earth quake and make California disappear beneath the waves!

It is a place of contrasts. Nature is beautiful, terrifying sometimes, but so enchanting. Surfing here is an art, a symbol of freedom and a way of life, though sometimes dangerous.

It is a crossroads of all cultures. From San Francisco, there is the spirit of freedom, the belief that there are no limits to possibilities, and that all experiences are worth trying. From Los Angeles, there is the feeling of excess, of esthetics in achievement, and the importance of money. From the neighboring Silicon Valley, there is this formidable spirit of creation, this desire to build and to innovate at all costs, and the certainty that an idea can change the world! From the San Andreas fault, the idea that we must take action, now and immediately, that opportunities must be seized and obstacles overcome.

The beach downwards this blue-gray house is called... LightHouse!

It is there that our firm was born.

To be free. To innovate. To undertake. To build. To enhance. To share.
To commit. To act. To love.

This is what inspires us every day.

This is our history. Let's share it!
