

LightHouse Beach, California

It is a blue-gray house hung on the hill. Below, the Pacific. Strong, violent, cold, but of an extraordinary beauty. The waves that form there are a source of inspiration, of suffering sometimes, of great sensations often. They end their course on a beach of clear and light sand.

It is a few miles south of San Francisco, a few hundred miles north of Los Angeles, just west of the famous Silicon Valley, and a stone's throw away from the famous San Andreas Fault which, one day, may shake the earth and make California disappear under the waves!

It is a place of contrasts. The nature is beautiful, sometimes terrifying, but so captivating. Surfing is an art, a symbol of freedom and a way of life, sometimes dangerous.

It is a crossroads of all cultures. From San Francisco, there is the spirit of freedom, the belief that the field of possibilities is immense, and that all experiences are worth trying. From Los Angeles, there is the sense of excess, of aesthetics in the making, and the importance of money. From the neighboring Silicon Valley, there is the great creative spirit, the will to build and innovate at all costs, and the certainty that an idea can change the world! From the San Andreas Fault, the idea that you have to get involved, now and right away, that you have to provoke opportunities and get ahead of the obstacles, immediately.

The beach below this blue-gray house is called... LightHouse!

This is where our firm was born.

To be free. To innovate. To undertake. To build. To grow. To share. To commit. To act. To love.

That's what inspires us every day.

This is our story. Let's share it!
